

Abstract

The present invention relates to a process for the conversion of phenol to hydroquinone and quinones. More particularly this invention relates to a process for the oxidation of phenol to a mixture of 1,4-benzoquinone and hydroquinone using an oxidant in the presence of titanium superoxide as a reusable catalyst in a liquid phase condition.

5